MDX Celebrates Milestones in Ongoing Mobility Improvement Plan

Miami-Dade Expressway Authority (MDX) has made another bold step forward in the expansion of its system, with the opening of an additional 30 lane miles of capacity over the past two years.

Why can’t taxes, not tolls, pay for MDX improvements?

According to a recently released study by the Reason Foundation, traffic congestion in Miami-Dade—home to 2.3 million residents and 4.54 million vehicles—costs the region an estimated $2.3 billion annually, with some commuters spending an additional 104 hours per year in traffic. MDX is addressing traffic congestion by investing in comprehensive long-term solutions to improve the mobility of our region.

Improvements along SR 836

• A fourth outside lane at the Westbound 57th Ave. interchange
• An exit ramp to NW 72nd Ave. was added, with optional reentry
• A 1.5 mile long auxiliary lane was constructed from Westbound

Improvements along SR 836 include:

• 4,000 pots of Muhly Grass
• 8,700 square yards of mulch

Speed-to-market transportation has become the currency of economic development. A lack of mobility will negatively affect businesses and residents alike. MDX is addressing this issue by investing in comprehensive long-term solutions to improve the mobility of our region.

MDX Cuts Corners in Space

MDX has partnered with Miami-Dade County and the other members of the Community Image Gateways in and out of our community. The effort will include a communications plan, campaign and informational material. Specific target areas will be the main gateways in and out of Miami-Dade County, including SR 836 and the Miami-Dade Expressway Authority (MDX). A dollar rarely goes so far. When the alternatives are considered, toll collection is a reasonable proposition.
